The Eight Principles of the Master Key System

An independent study guide for examining eight principles with practical attention.

1. Truth

Truth begins with seeing what is actually present. Separate an observation from an assumption and notice when

2. Tact

Tact is thoughtful judgement in relationship with other people. It includes sympathy, understanding and the ability to

3. Loyalty

Loyalty is steadiness toward a chosen value, promise or relationship. It is tested by ordinary repetition: keeping

4. Individuality

Individuality means developing your own understanding and responsibility. Study can offer a map, but it cannot

5. Courage

Courage is the capacity to take a considered step while uncertainty is still present. It may mean asking an honest

6. Accumulation

Accumulation describes how repeated attention and practice build a pattern over time. A single reflection may fe

7. Constructiveness

Constructiveness asks whether your thinking leads toward useful action. It is not forced optimism. It means identifying

8. Sagacity

Sagacity is practical wisdom: the ability to weigh context, timing and consequences before choosing. It grows th

A practical reflection

Choose one principle that feels relevant today. Write down one situation in which it already appears, one situation

Seven-minute exercise: Set a timer for seven quiet minutes. Read your chosen principle once, breathe normally
